

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In publishing this monograph, the material for which was collected by the joint effort of several research workers, the author is aware of his great indebtedness to several persons without whose aid it could not have been written and to the research organizations that sponsored the study.

The investigation was carried out by the Committee on Price Control and Rationing, which was organized under the joint auspices of the Cowles Commission for Research in Economics and the Conference on Price Research of the National Bureau of Economic Research. The funds were provided by these two bodies and, upon their application, by the Rockefeller Foundation. The Committee on Price Control¹ made use of the facilities of the Cowles Commission at the University of Chicago and of its personnel.

The plan for the investigation originated with Professor Theodore O. Yntema, who organized the Committee on Price Control and Rationing and was its first Director. Mr. Leonid Hurwicz, the first Associate Director of the Committee, conducted its first surveys, the results of which have been used in this report.

During a period of two years, when most of the surveys were made, professor Jacob Marschak, Research Director of the Cowles Commission, supervised the research work. The author wishes to acknowledge his great obligation and deep gratitude to Professor Marschak for his advice in matters of principle as well as of detail and for his careful revision of this manuscript.

Sincere thanks are due to the research assistants, interviewers, and office staff, who participated with great zeal in the investigation. The author is particularly indebted to Mr. D. H. Leavens of the Cowles Commission who saw the book through the press, to Mrs. Sylvia Markley Kafka whose contributions as editor were invaluable, and to Messrs. L. A. Dexter, J. M. Letiche, and R. A. Weil, and Miss Bernice Levenfeld, for their contributions in research and interviewing. For shorter periods valuable work was also done by Mr. M. L. Braude, Miss R. Cargill, Mr. J. Cohen, Mr. F. Danson, Mr. R. H. Engle, Mr. R. Ferber, Mr. A. H. Leigh, and Miss E. Manning.

¹ The members of the Committee were: Messrs. Oscar Lange, Jacob Marschak, Edward Mason (until the spring of 1944), Jacob Viner, Clair Wilcox (beginning with the spring of 1944), and Theodore O. Yntema. Messrs. Joel Dean and Roswell H. Whitman were also members of the Committee during the initial phase of its work.

The study profited greatly from the constant interest displayed by Professor Edward S. Mason, Chairman of the Conference on Price Research until the spring of 1944, and Professor Clair Wilcox, Chairman of the Conference after that time. In addition to members of the Committee on Price Control, Messrs. Alfred Cowles, A. G. Hart, Alex Elson, D. Gale Johnson, and Mrs. Christine McGuire Masserman kindly read the manuscript and offered much useful advice.

The author and research staff were at all times aware of the requirement of the sponsors that the project be carried out by an independent and impartial agency, and never felt dependent upon or partial to either business or government. Yet their work could not have been done without the constant and generous help of both. Sincere thanks are due to several hundred Chicago businessmen, some of whom spent many hours in answering questions and furnishing data for the purposes of the study, as well as to many officials of the Office of Price Administration in Washington and Chicago, who kindly supplied much useful information.

One characteristic feature of the study is the application of psychological methods to economic research and the attempt made toward a psychological analysis of economic behavior. The author is greatly indebted to the Cowles Commission for Research in Economics for having given him the opportunity to pursue his interest in "economic psychology."²

GEORGE KATONA

² The need for coordination of the two disciplines, economics and psychology, was set forth by the author in his book, War without Inflation, the Psychological Approach to Problems of War Economy, New York, 1942.